GOVERNOR DENEEN DEFENDS HIS RECORD

CHIEF EXECUTIVE AND CANDIDATE FOR RE-ELECTION MADE BRIEF SPEECH IN DIXON.

CALLS PROGRESSIVISM CLOAK

Tells of Making Good Record With Past Promises and Points Out Enemies and Explains How He Made Them — Dickson Says I. N. G. Wants to Come Back.

Governor Charles S. Deneen, accompanied by General Dickson, arrived in Dixon this afternoon at 1:10 o'clock, about 15 minutes behind the schedule, from Sterling on his special train, and was driven directly to the opera house, where a band and an immense crowd awaited him.

GOV. CHARLES S. DENEEN, Who Spoke in Dixon This Afternoon

The cadets from the Rock River Military Academy, under command of Capt. Barnard, were on hand to receive the governor, and they lined both sides of the stairs ascending into the opera house.

The governor was pleased with this reception and thanked the students of the academy later in his talk.

Hon. Jason C. Ayres introduced Governor Deneen and the latter immediately launched into the subject which he had come to talk about, as his time was short and he had many things to say. In fact, he overstayed his time, for his train was due to leave at 1:55, but did not leave until 2:45 o'clock.

Twelve Speeches Today.

The governor, when he finishes at Elgin this evening, will have made twelve speeches today. Dixon was the sixth. He has talked in 86 counties in the last two weeks and is following up an itinerary that seems almost "quicker than the eye."

The opera house was well filled, and the audience, though not demonstrative, seemed much impressed with what the governor had to say and the way in which he said it, for Mr. Deenen is rather a good orator.

Defends His Record

The governor devoted much of his speech to a defense of his administration, and in the short time he had at his disposal he talked to the point 'A governor's record can be sized up on the extent to which he has fulfilled his promises," said Mr. Deneen. "and I wish to call the attention of this audience to the fact that the compulsory primary law, the civil service law and the rehabilitation of the charitable institutions, promised at the outset of my campaign, have been accomplished. It took four attempts before we got a primary law that stood the test of the supreme court, and different representatives and senators have claimed the credit for each of them—until they were knocked out, and then all agreed that they were Deneen laws.

The state civil service law is one of which the governor is especially proud, in that as a result of it he claims the state leads every state in the union, and in fact the national government in the per cent of its employes who are under civil service. The executive also briefly outlined the work that has been done in bettering the charitable institutions of the commonwealth, making them scientific and curative rather than merely custodians.

His Opponents

The governor stated that there were plenty of reasons why he should run behind his ticket if he did in the coming election. The Illinois Central railroad company, whom he claims he has forced to pay $15,000,000 into the state treasury, the corporations which have endeavored to have their famous blanket bill passed, and by jack-potters and bi-partisans, he expects to vote and work against him.

His reference to the progressives was short. He gave it as his opinion that these people were introducing things that had been discovered by Washington and the fathers of the country, to draw attention from the real issues, while they perfected plans for un-political measures, whereby he and his administration could be defeated.

Dickson Makes Short Talk.

The governor had merely gone nicely started when he was stopped by Gen. Dickson, the time having expired. Mr. Deneen introduced his adjutant general, however, and Gov. Dickson stated, "There's no doubt Gov. Deneen is all right on his record as a business governor, but he's bum on his railroad schedule, and we have to watch him all the time. Before I go, however, I want to thank him for giving me the opportunity to thank the people of Dixon for the excellent treatment they afforded us during the encampment here last summer, and to assure you that we of the Guard hope to come back again."

BISHOP DOANE

William C. Doane, Episcopal bishop of Albany, N. Y., recently celebrated his 80th birthday. Episcopal clergymen from all parts of the country gathered at Albany to do honor to the veteran churchman. Bishop Doane has directed the affairs of the Albany diocese for forty-three years, and is still as active as ever.

TWO COUPLES SEEK DIVORCE

MRS. LUELLA HAMMOND, PAWPAW, SAYS HUSBAND DESERTED HER—CALVIN MEESE SAYS WIFE LEFT HIM.

Two divorce cases were filed in the Lee county circuit court today, the charges in both cases being desertion Another coincidence is that both couples were married in Dixon in October, 1909.

Attorney W. B. McHenry of Rochelle and Attorneys Brooks and Brooks of this city represent the clients. Mr. McHenry appears for Mrs. Luella Hammond of Pawpaw, who seeks legal separation from her husband, Daniel Hammond, to whom she claims she was married at Dixon Oct. 24, 1909. She claims they lived together until the 30th of that month when without provocation or reason, she alleges he deserted her and has not lived with her since.

The other plaintiff is Calvin Meese of this city, who has filed suit against Clara Meese. The couple, according to the bill, were married in this city Oct. 7, 1909, and lived together until Dec. 5 of that year, when he claims, she deserted him.

GOOD LECTURE ON PANAMA CANAL

AUDIENCE WHICH FILLED M. E. CHURCH HEARD EXCELLENT TALK BY. REV. HOLLAND.

The Methodist church was filled last evening by an interested audience who were delighted with the lecture delivered by Rev. John W. Holland of the Galena Street Methodist church in Aurora. The subject was "Panama," and the talk was illustrated by many pictures of work and life in the canal zone.

Many of the pictures Mr. Holland made himself, while others were made by the war department.

One topic on which Mr. Holland dwelt at length and which was very interesting, was disease and its extermination in the canal zone. The speaker told of the many millions of dollars the U. S. government spent in stamping out fever and other pestilences of the tropics that killed men by the thousands when the work was first started, until now the death rate in the zone is three per cent less than that of the city of Chicago

Rev. Holland spent a year on the "Big Ditch" as chaplain for the U. S. troops there, and it was in this way that he became familiar with his subject of last evening.

County officials in several districts have pledged their support to him.

Mr. Jackson comes from the 13th district, has thirteen letters in his name and also has four brothers who each have thirteen letters in their names.

COMPLETE ARRANGEMENTS

The entertainment committee of the Y. M. C. A. met last evening with representatives of lyceum bureaus and practically completed arrangements for an entertainment course next year which will be even stronger than the successful affair this season. The committee is not ready as yet, however, to make any further announcement as to the talent to be secured.

Dr. C. H. Frizelle was in Sterling today.

PLAN TO CHANGE INSTITUTE PROGRAM

MANY BELIEVE IT WISE TO HOLD ONE-DAY INSTITUTE IN THREE LEE COUNTY TOWNS.

WANT PAID FARM DEVELOPER

Would Emulate DeKalb and Hire a Specialist to Look After Crop Development, Etc., in Lee County.

As was hinted in yesterday's published account of the proceedings of the board of supervisors, the executive committee of the Lee County Farmers' Institute, of which Abram Ackert is president, is considering the advisability of changing the plan for the annual institutes. and the plan they propose is meeting with favor.

In explaining the situation Mr. Ackert says: "There has been a great deal of adverse talk against holding three days' session of the institute in one particular place each year, in that it is usually impossible for all who would wish to attend to do so.

"We believe that by holding three sessions of one day each, in different parts of the county, we can do more good in an educational line and will be able to reach more people. It would also allow us to specialize more in the nature of the instructive addresses to be given. For instance, in communities where the dairy interests predominate speakers for that particular feature could be secured. In the corn districts we would specialize on that, etc.

Would Abandon Exhibit.

Should the committee decide to follow the new scheme it is very probable that the annual exhibit of farm products, which is usually held in connection with the institute, would be abandoned and the farmers' organization would lend its aid to make the exhibit at the Lee county fair larger and more comprehensive. It is argued that the exhibit has grown to such proportions and the cities that have had it during the past few years have established such good records with it that it has gotten to be a very large undertaking for any community to take up. By assisting the fair association to make the exhibit in connection with the 'pumpkin show' larger and better, the committee of the Farmers' organization believe the same end will be reached and that the institute can be made more valuable as an educational feature.

The matter will be definitely decided upon at some future meeting of the executive committee of the institute.

May Take Up Work.

During the afternoon session of the board of supervisors yesterday, several talks were made regarding the status of farm developments in Lee county and some of the sppervisors expressed themselves as being willing to follow the example of DeKalb county, where Prof. Eckert, formerly of the University of Illinois, has been engaged at a salary of $4,000 per year to look after DeKalb county's agricultural interests and bring the county to the top in its productive value. It is reasonably certain from the talks among the supervisors yesterday afternoon that any movement of this nature would receive encouragement from the supervisors if it were presented to them.

BREWERS MUST NOT LEASE TO SALOONS

NEW ORDINANCE FILED TO PREVENT BREWERS FROM HOLDING LEASES ON BUILDINGS IN WHICH LIQUOR IS SOLD.

As a result of the agitation which has developed since the passing by the city council Monday evening of the ordinance preventing any change in the location of the saloons in Dementtown and the changes made at that time, the members of the city council, after a conference, have drafted a new and more stringent ordinance, the text of which appears below.

This ordinance, which was filed yesterday will, if passed, prevent buildings owned, leased or sub leased by anyone connected with the brewing or distilling business in any way, being occupied by saloons. The proposed ordinance is:

Saloon and Dram Shop Ordinance.

An ordinance providing for the filing by each applicant for a license to keep a dram shop in the City of Dixon, Illinois, a certified copy of lease and his affidavit that no brewer or distiller, etc., is interested in the lease, etc.

Be It Ordained by the City Council of the City of Dixon, Illinois:

Section 1—That every applicant for a license to keep a dram shop in the City of Dixon, shall reduce his application for such license to writing and file the same with the City Clerk of said City of Dixon; that at the time of filing and application, he shall also file with said clerk of said City of Dixon (if at the time of filing his said application said applicant is occupying, or will occupy the hotel, store building, house or any room or rooms therein, or any part or parts thereof, as a tenant for the purpose of keeping and conducting a dram shop) a certified copy of the lease, contract or agreement under and by which he occupies or is to occupy said premises as such tenant, and until such lease, contract or agreement is reduced to writing and a certified copy thereof filed as above required no license to keep a dram shop in said City of Dixon shall be issued to such applicant.

Section 2—That every applicant before he shall be entitled to receive a license to keep a dram shop in the City of Dixon, shall make affidavit in writing and file the same with the city clerk of said City of Dixon showing that no person or persons engaged in the Brewing, Distilling or kindred business as owner, agent, stockholder, or in anywise conntcted with, or interested in, the manufacture of vinous, spirituous, or malt liquors, as an individual, firm or corporation or in any way connected with, or interested in, the wholesale traffic thereof, or who is a member of any Brewer's or Distiller's association, is in any way interested directly or indirectly in the lease, control or agreement by and under which said applicant occupies the hotel, store building, house or any room or rooms therein, or any part or parts thereof, or basement thereunder or in or upon any premises of any kind or nature whatsoever in said City of Dixon for the purpose of keeping and conducting therein or thereon a saloon or dram shop. And should the applicant be the owner of the property occupied by him for the purpose of keeping or conducting a saloon or dram shop in said City of Dixon, he shall before receiving a license to conduct the same, file with the city clerk of said City, satisfactory evidence in writing that he is the owner thereof together with the affidavit required by this section to be filed.

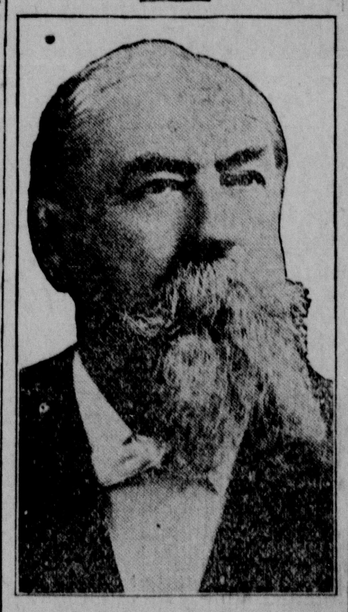

Section 3—That any applicant who shall violate any of the provisions of sections One and Two of this ordinance by filing a false or fraudulent writing or writings, certified copy or copies of lease, contract or agreement, or shall swear falsely as to any material facts required to be shown by his affidavit, he shall be subject to a fine of not less than One Hundred Dollars nor more than Two Hundred Dollars.

Section 4—This ordinance shall be in force and take effect from and after its passage and publication as required by law.

MEN KNOWN HERE ARE IN LIMELIGHT

JOHN MASSEION AND REPRESENTATIVE SCANLAN FIGURE IN SUIT BROUGHT BY WOMAN.

John Masseion, city attorney of Peru, who studied law at Attorney E. E. Wingert's office in this city, and who has visited here several times, and his law partner, Representative Wm. M. Scanlan, also well known here, are in the limelight through a suit for divorce filed yesterday in Chicago by a young woman who claims to be Scanlan's wife and who, it is said, the representative claims he never married.

This young woman, whose home is in Spring Valley, where she is known as Carrie Ankiewicz, has taken her 3 1-2 months' old baby to Chicago with her, and will fight her suit there. In a statement yesterday she said: "I am either the legal wife of Mr. Scanlan, or the ceremony that was performed at the Kaiserhof hotel on July 6, last, was fraudulent. It is true that I accepted money for release from Mr. Scanlan in a serious case, but that has nothing to do with the question whether I am his wife or not. Besides, I did not know what I was signing when I signed the paper prepared by John Masseion, Mr. Scanlan's law partner."

FACTORY INSPECTION DEPT. SHORT OF FUNDS

Through the failure of the last legislature to appropriate the amount asked for by the department of factory inspection, the members of the staff of that department, of which Charles E. Frisby of this city is one, are hampered by lack of funds and have been ordered to remain as near home as possible in their work. The department asked for $117,000, after the legislature had added five inspectors to the force, but the appropriation was but $36,000.

Wires That Coveted Goal Was Reached December 14 to 17, 1911.

NO NEWS FROM CAPTAIN SCOTT

Briton Reported to Have Also Reached World's Axis—All Europe in Midst of Conflict Again Over Claims of Explorers.

London, March 8.—The Daily Chronicle publishes the following cablegram from Leon Amundsen, the explorer's brother:

"Christiania, March 8.—The following telegram has been received from Hobart, Tasmania: 'Pole attained fourteenth - seventeenth December, 1911. All well.—Roald Amundsen.'"

London, March 8.—Captain Raold Amundsen has discovered the south pole. Definite news has been received in London via Christiania that he reached the pole between the 14th and 17th of December.

Auckland, New Zealand, March 8.—Word reached here through Capt. Raold Amundsen that Capt. Robert F. Scott, the English explorer, has reached the south pole. Captain Amundsen declines to make any statement in regard to his own expedition.

Wellington, New Zealand, March 8.—Captain Amundsen arriving at Hobart, Tasmania, reports that Captain Scott has reached the south pole.

Reports Scott Victory.

London, March 8.—Quickly following the dispatch from Hobart, Tasmania, that Captain Amundsen had arrived there, a telegram reached the Daily Express from Wellington, saying: "Amundsen states Scott reached pole."

Beyond these dispatches and the news from Christiania, Norway, which Amundsen cabled there, confirming his arrival at Hobart, nothing is known. Yesterday's reports that Captain Scott had been successful were based apparently on the newspaper inquiries of Scott's friends several days ago as to when he was likely to be heard from.

Mrs. Scott has received no news from her husband and does not expect to hear from him for at least a month.

All Europe Wrought Up.

London, March 8.—With the strong belief that Capt. Robert Falcon Scott of the British navy has reached the south pole, and the news from Christiania, Norway, to the effect that the Norse explorer, Capt. Roald Amundsen, has also attained the same goal, all Europe is in the midst of conflict of claims and opinions between the adherents of the two daring Antarctic explorers.

Explains Delay of News From Scott.

Definite word from Scott is missing but this is explained by the fact that the Scott expedition, in addition to being for the purpose of exploration, was also commissioned to bring back valuable scientific and geographical data believed to be found at the pole, whereas the Amundsen dash was for the sole purpose of planting the Norwegian flag on the mythical location representing the pole.

The dispatches give no date of the discovery or no mention of the whereabouts of the Scott party, but the arrival of the captain and his men at some southern port is hourly expected.

Peary Silent; Nansen Talks.

New York, March 8.—Commodore Peary and Dr. Fridtjoff Nansen, whose ship Fram, used by him in the Arctic, carried Amundsen on his dash southward, estimated as about even Scott's and Amundsen's chances of winning the great race

Peary expressed pleasure, according to a Washington dispatch, when he heard of Scott's victory. He refused to discuss the subject until he heard details.

"There is good reason to believe that both expeditions will reach the south pole," says Captain Nansen.

PUT NEW TANK IN USE.

It is very probable that the new water tank at the Northwestern station will be put into use some time next week. The big steel tank, which was constructed during the winter, has been completed with the exception of the connections, and the plumbing gang is now at work on those details which, however, when completed, will allow the use of the tank.

MAKES FIRST RAILWAY TRIP

Eighty-Year-Old Wisconsin Woman Is Guest of Railway Officials on Opening of New Line.

Milwaukee.—Now and then railroad building operations disturb some queer conditions.

The aged woman shown in the accompanying photograph, had neither seen nor ridden on a railroad train until recently, when the Northwestern people opened a new line in Wisconsin and began running through trains over it to the Pacific coast. One of the counties penetrated was Adams, which up to that time did not have a foot of railroad inside of its borders.

It was at one of the stations of this new line that a palace train picked up a passenger with an odd claim. She was Mrs. Jeannette Dalton, and that was the name of the station at which she boarded the train. At once she began to talk to the conductor, to whom she intrusted the information that although she was eighty years old she had neither seen nor ridden on a train until that very minute. She had settled in Green Lake county as far back as 1838, when she did her traveling by ox team. She therefore had lived within a comparatively short distance of the capital of the great Badger domain seventy-three years without seeing or hearing such a thing as a railroad train. On this occasion she was out for a visit in Milwaukee, where she received much attention from the railroad people.

COWS GET APPLE-MASH JAG

New Jersey Herd Find Trough of Mashed Apples and Imbibe Too Freely, With Usual Result.

Rockford, N. J.—A herd of ten cows on a farm near here recently found a trough of apple-mash which had been standing in the sun after passing through the cider mill. They lapped up the mash in short order, and a few moments later gave an exhibition which had never before been witnessed in this part of the country. They tore down fences, some of the cows ran around in a circle, with their tails in the air, and cut all sorts of ludicrous antics. Finally one after another sank down to the ground and went to sleep. It took five hours to sleep off the jag.

Skis Save Man From Bear.

White Salmon, Wash.—To snowshoes and skis can R. C. Bruce, son of a Minneapolis lumberman, give credit that he is alive today. While tramping in deep snows outside of the city, near a lumber camp, young Bruce came upon a big black bear. He shot, but the bullet only inflicted a wound enough to infuriate the beast, and it gave chase. Bruce found he had fired his last shot and, without further parley, took to flight. The snows were deep and on snowshoes Bruce was able to keep only a few feet ahead of the beast, but when he reached the crest of a hill he hurriedly threw off the snowshoes, replacing the same with skis he was dragging, and coasted down a hill to safety.

Partly Brainless Man Dies.

Evansville, Ind.—After living two months with half a pound of his brains gone, Andrew J. Kueber, age 42, died at a local hospital the other day. Two months ago Kueber fired several shots at his divorced wife, and when she escaped unhurt he shot himself in the head. He was taken to a hospital, where an operation was performed and physicians removed six or seven ounces of his brains.

Dramatic Notes

FAMILY THEATRE

The Harmeon Four appeared at the Family theatre last evening in a number of vocal and instrumental selections—solos, duets, musical selections and character impersonations, one called In Deutchland and the other In Old Madrid. The company is composed of two ladies and two gentlemen and all are good singers and their entire program was heartily enjoyed. Revelle & Dewey have an exceptionally strong aerial act and show much skill. A special feature Kalem film called His Mother will be shown this evening, depicting scenes in Ireland.

OPERA HOUSE.

Ask any metropolitan theatrical manager to name the biggest money-making play produced in the last 30 years and he will unhesitatingly reply, Stetson's Uncle Tom's Cabin. That this is true there can be no doubt. It is a well known fact that season after season, wherever the Stetson company appears, it is patronized not only by the regular theatre goers but by devout church members as well. The Stetson company, which will appear at the Dixon opera house Wednesday evening, March 13, is the only one to have received the unqualified approval of Harriet Beecher Stowe, the authoress of this famous and widely read book. Southland before the war is faithfully depicted by the Stetson company in the time honored drama, which never fails to amuse, please and instruct all classes and ages. From the first to the last curtain there is enough tears and laughter, pathos and comedy artistically plended to produce an ideal play; a play which becomes more popular with each new year. Always unapproachable in specialties and handsome stage pictures, the Stetson company this season has eclipsed its previous enviable record in the matter of scenic, mechanical and electrical effects, costumes and vaudeville features. The same popular prices of former seasons will prevail during the forthcoming engagement.

LESSON [No. 3]

From Dr. Rose, Optician

My talk to you this week is very important, if you are a sufferer from headaches caused by straining the eyes. It is very important to you, of course, that you should use your eyes, but nature never intended that you should abuse them. I know that most headaches come from straining the normal eye or from using imperfect eyes or, in other words, eyes which do not focus. My experience leads me to believe that all strained eyes can be relieved by properly fitted glasses. When this strain is relieved the headache disappears. Now reason a little: If you are a sufferer from headaches, and you suspect that the cause is strained vision, then my argument must appeal to your case. My experience, gained from treating many cases of eye strain, is valuable to you. Try the remedy of glasses as I fit them, and you will not be disappointed.

DEMENTTOWN

Cheer up. Only two more weeks of ground hog weather.

Which reminds us that, to hear them talk, almost everybody in town predicted this old-fashioned winter.

Who reported Reilley? Some more people c2k about the depot.

We wonder if tha' was a ringing speech Gov. Bell delivered to the troops when they were leaving the Orient.

A Sterling bride weighs 280 lbs. Gosh, think of the job of supporting her.

There's a whole lot of good cabinet material going to waste around Allen's barber shop. Somebody should put Taft hep.

It is reported that the Central is figuring on puttin on an 18-hour train—18 hours late.

Dave Fane likes chewing tobacco, but he doesn't like any of the specially treated kind—like Bill Lowrey gave him the other day. That piece contained red pepper, and Dave's remarks are said to have verified the statement of the paper manufacturer, that it was the hottest on the market. An interview with Dave on this subject should be conducted over the telephone.

Which reminds that Bill was some mad himself this a. m. Bill, you know is car repairer at the Northwestern, so when the "teleyfoan" rang this a. m. and he got word that No. 2 had just left Sterling with a bad hot box on the baggage car and the crew wanted a cooler here, he got busy. He lugged a big can of water the length of the depot platform, and that can weighed in the neighborhood of a quarter of a ton, then he got out his grease cans, brasses, etc and waited for the ill-fated train. It came along presently, but it kept coming faster and as it passed through Dixon the suction was so great that it took all Bill's breath away so he couldn't swear. Finally he did remark that it must have been a new engine crew and they thougght this was Nelson.

And Echo Answers, Who?

It is reported that soon after Vaile & McIntyre organized their coal firm Frank got religious to such an extent that he joined the church. And from that day on he kept harping at John to do likewise. All Frank could talk of was the church and the good it was doing him. He urged John to come in, until in desperation John answered the argument thusly: "Frank, for heaven's sake, shut up. If I join the church now, who in thunder would weigh the coal?"

He hung a good one on a stranger last week, too, when the out of town feller asked him if there was a good criminal lawyer in town. Darius said, "Everybody knows we've got one, but we ain't been able to prove it on him yit."

Dementtown musically inclined subscribers will doubtless enjoy the music which is to appear in Saturday evening's Telegraph.

CONFESS THEIR GUILT

Rice and Scheftels Make Plea to Conspiracy Charge.

Former Gets Year, Dating From Last December—Sentence of Latter Is Suspended.

New York, March 8.—George Graham Rice and Bernard H. Scheftels of the brokerage firm of B. H. Scheftels & Co., pleaded guilty to the charge of conspiracy and misuse of the mails, and thus brought to a dramatic close a trial that has been in progress in the United States district court for the last two months.

Rice was sentenced to a year in jail, his sentence dating from last December 29, when he was put in the Tombs after one of the jurors had been approached. With time off for good behavior, he will spend about six months in jail.

Scheftels went free on suspended sentence and Charles F. Beiser, Charles B. Stone and Ralph E. Waterman, the other defendants, were discharged.

The brokerage house of B. H. Scheftels & Co., 42-44 Broad street, was raided September 29, 1910, by agents of the department of justice. At the same time the firm's branch offices in a dozen other cities were raided and the managers arrested.

$100,000,000 FOR JOHN D.

Standard Oil Stock Soars to Record High Price, Re-Enriching Holders.

New York, March 8.—Shares of the old Standard Oil company of New Jersey reached a record breaking price on the curb here, selling at 890 each, a rise of 35 to 40 points over the previous day and an advance of almost of $200 from the price quoted when the Supreme court ordered the company's dissolution. On the assumption that the Rockefellers own more than a majority of the stock, which consists of 1,000,000 shares, the fortunes of that family may be said to have increased by more than $100,000,000 through the advance in the price of the stock.

MRS. M'CORMICK PROTESTS

Indicts New Tuberculosis Hospital in Washington—Mrs. Taft Present.

Washington, March 8.—An angry indictment of the new $500,000 tuberculosis hospital of the District of Columbia, was made by Mrs. Medill McCormick of Chicago before the Women's Welfare Department of the National Civic federation in convention here. Scornfully Mrs. McCormick pointed out that the hospital is dirty, that it supplies low grade milk and cold storage eggs to its patients, and that out of 412 cases treated, only five patients were cured. There were 200 deaths. Among those who heard Mrs. McCormick was Mrs. Taft, wife of the president.

SENATE RATIFIES ARBITRATION PLAN

After Making Many Material Changes in Its Original Form.

ACTION TAKEN IS A SURPRISE

Amendment to the Treaties Are of Such a Nature as to Mar Their Effectiveness for Universal Peace.

Washington, March 8.—After making changes in President Taft's arbitration treaties with England and France, the senate ratified them by a vote of 76 to 3. The treaties as they have been left by the senate exempt questions subject to arbitration, all disputes over the application of the Monroe doctrine, all difference as to the admission of aliens to the United States or to the public schools, and all matters relating to the territorial integrity of the several states of the United States.

Treaties Materially Changed.

So riddled are the treaties that it is not believed that the president will press their acceptance upon the governments with which they were to be concluded.

It had been expected that the treaties would be ratified as they stood by a close vote. Such an assault on them as was made by the combined forces of the Democrats and the progressives proved such a surprise that the friends of the administration were powerless to meet it.

Will Effect Universal Peace.

After a three-day debate a vote was agreed upon. With the vote came the offering of amendments and the fight that resulted practically in a defeat, not only of the president, but for the cause of universal peace, for which Secretary Knox has been laboring assiduously since he took his office.

FEARS OF BIG STRIKE

Caused General Rush of Consumers for Supply.

New Yorkers Hurry to Market to Protect Themselves Against Walkout of 180,000 Miners.

New York, March 8.—Fears of a strike of the 180,000 anthracite coal miners on April 1 has caused a general rush on the part of consumers for coal to carry them over a strike period.

This sudden demand became widespread when it was reported that the railroads, instead of having a large amount of coal in storage in preparation for a possible strike, really were running short and making every effort to increase their depleted reserve.

In consequence many dealers have increased the price of coal from $1 to $1.25 a ton. The operators state the coal at the mines now is selling at the regular March price.

SPEAKER HAS A BIRTHDAY

Celebrates Sixty-Second Anniversary of Natal Day.

Washington, March 8.—Champ Clark, speaker of the house, celebrated his sixty-second birthday anniversary. He put in 15 hours of handshaking and acknowledgment of congratulations. The day began with a reception by his own office force. It was followed by a demonstration on the floor of the house, from which the speaker fled, later by a presentation of a huge bunch of carnations by the pages and messengers of the house, and wound up with a great mass meeting in Convention hall which cheered every allusion to the presiding officer of the house.

GIVE WOMEN VOTE IN OHIO

Constitutional Convention Would Give Them General Privilege.

The action of the delegates will be submitted to the man voters, along with other proposed amendments for ratification.

Alabama Goes for Taft.

Birmingham, Ala., March 8.—President Taft was indorsed and national convention delegates were instructed to vote for him by the state convention of the Alabama Republican organization here today.

A SENSATIONAL FLIGHT

Aviator Salvi Flies From London to Paris.

Airman Makes Nonstop Trip and Starts Back—Coffyn Circles Statue of Liberty.

Paris, March 8.—Aviator Salvi left the Issy Aerodrome here in an effort to make a nonstop return flight to London. He arrived at Issy from Hendon, a suburb of London, earlier in the day, having successfully completed the first half of his record-breaking trip.

By the route traveled Salvi covered 227 miles in 325 minutes. He left the Hendon aerodrome at 6 o'clock and made fast time all the way.

When Salvi descended he was so chilled from the rain and cold that he had to be helped from his monoplane. He revived, however, after partaking of hot drinks and being wrapped in blankets.

Salvi said that after leaving Hendon he encountered pleasant weather through the English part of his trip.

New York, March 8.—Five thousand persons, among them Wilbur Wright of Dayton, O., saw Frank T. Coffyn, the young aviator, make a nine-minute flight over the bay here, during which he circled the Statue of Liberty. Coffyn used his hydro-aeroplane, and several times dropped his machine to the surface of the water, then rose again.

VIOLATE LAW; PUNISHED

Railroad Fined for Infraction of Federal Hours of Service Law.

Washington, March 8.—The interstate commerce commission announced the recovery of penalties for violations of the federal hours of service law. Eight hundred dollars was a fine imposed by Judge Dietrich of the United States circuit court of Idaho on the Oregon Short Line railroad. One thousand dollars was recovered from the Yazoo & Mississippi Valley and the Illinois Central companies, and $500 from the Southern railroad for violations of the safety appliance regulations.

FREE SEEDS TO CONTINUE

House, After Turbulent Session, Continues Congress Perquisite.

Washington, March 8.—Presents of free seeds to constituents by congressmen at the expense of the government are to be continued, the house in one of the most turbulent sessions of weeks refusing to cut the $268,000 item for this gratuity out of the agricultural department appropriation bill. The last effort to kill it was an amendment from Representative Jackson of Kansas to have the distribution done by the department instead of by congressmen.

WHAT Is Your Disease?

DR. R. S. PIPER

Will Be At Hotel Nachusa, Dixon

FRIDAY, Mar. 15th

Office Hours---8:30 a. m. to 4 p. m.

"He is honest wit[illegible] ou"

He Returns Every Twenty-eight Days.

Why You Should Come

Many have asked Dr. Piper, how it is that he can cure chronic diseases that the general practitioner can do nothing with. The general answer is: Dr. Piper has devoted his life to the specialty of Chronic Disease. He devotes all of his time to his given specialty. He does nothing but office work. Instead of having one office with a practice limited to a radius of a few miles, he has a number of offices, and his practice covers hundreds of miles. He advertises for the difficult and baffling cases that have been seeking relief sometimes for years, many of which come to him and find health and happiness, through the aid of his diagnostic methods and deep acting blood remedies. His advice is always welcome to you. YOU PLACE YOURSELF UNDER NO OBLIGATION WHEN YOU CALL. Come at once and consult the doctor—next time may be too late. Many of you who have been taking medicine and so called treatments for months will be absolutely cured in a few weeks. Very chronic cases will require somewhat longer time, but it will make no difference; you will be treated free, remedies excepted, until you can say, "I AM CURED."

Catarrh Are your lungs or bronchial tubes weak? Do you cough and expectorate diseased mucus? Does your nose stop up? Is your breath offensive? Have you a bad taste in your mouth? Have you pains in your chest? Are you bothered with shortness of breath and weak spells? Do you have throat trouble with hawking and clearing of your throat? Do you have dripping of sticking mucus from the back part of your nose into your throat? Call and have the doctor examine you. There is no need for you to have Catarrh. It often leads to that dreaded disease that is killing thousands of our best people—Consumption. Dr. Piper's treatment can be used in your home daily. No need of expensive office treatments.

Chronic Stomach Trouble causes more people to be misunderstood than any other diseased condition of the body. You are irritable in disposition—easily angered. You have plenty of ideas, but never carry any of them out. You are always tired. You have to force yourself to accomplish anything. You become blue and despondent and have many other symptoms which you know only too well. These are the mental symptoms of a deranged stomach. Other symptoms are: Bloating, Belching of gas, sour or greasy matter from the stomach, Pain, Distress, Weakness, Palpitation of the heart, Constipation or Diarrhoea, Unhealthy complexion, Changeable appetite, and Coated tongue. All these symptoms point to a deranged digestion. If you have any of these symptoms, lose no time. Dr. R. S. Piper's deep-acting remedies will cure you, no matter how many doctors have failed. His specialty is the curing of deep, aggravated chronic diseases. His motto is PAY HIM HIS FEE WHEN CURED.

Rheumatism Are you beginning to become sore and stiffened in your joints or muscles? Are your joints congested and swollen? Are your muscles and ligaments contracted? Do you have headaches? Is your tongue coated and your breath bad? Is your urine high colored and offensive? Do you have palpitation of your heart? Do not delay one day longer than you have to, but consult the master specialist, who will tell you what can be done for you. If there are no structural changes, your case is probably curable.

Lost Vitality Have you never recovered from an old illness? Are you despondent, blue and melancholic over your condition? Do you have spells or fits? Are you becoming anxious and fearful of the future? Are you troubled with nervousness and trembling of your limbs? Do you have that tired feeling in the morning? Is your memory failing you? Let Dr. Piper build you up to your former condition as he has done to many suffering likewise.

Men Are you suffering from early abuses, lost vital power, losses and drains, backache, weak back, shooting pains in the back, chest, back and limbs, palpitation of the heart, restless nights, bad dreams, loss of ambition and mental activity, nervousness, irritable temper, bad blood diseases which have been neglected or mistreated? No matter how chronic your trouble may be or how many have treated you, consult the master specialist, Dr. R. S. Piper. He cures 99% of all these cases that appeal to him. His medicines are quick acting and curative. Don't let false modesty keep you away. These diseases are just as legitimate a branch of medicine as any disease of the stomach, etc. Be a man amongst men before it is too late!

Are You Suffering From Bloating, Belching of gas or food from your stomach, Pain or distress in your stomach, constipation or loose bowels, Warts or Moles, Bed Wetting, Creepy or numb sensations in the limbs, The effects of an old illness, Despondency, Melancholia, Loss of Vital Energy, Loss of ambition, Wasting diseases, Varicose veins, Deep-seated blood diseases, Early abuses that have been neglected, Headaches, Shooting pains in the head, neck, back, And limbs, Dizziness, Rheumatism, Auto-intoxication, Infections of a private nature, Drains and losses, Nervous prostration, Piles, Sleeplessness, Neuralgia, Poor circulation, Palpitation of the heart, Shortness of breath, Lame back, Spots floating before the eyes, Dyspepsia Biliousness, Kidney and Bladder trouble, Catarrh of any part of the body, Epilepsy or fits, Asthma Bronchitis, Eczema, Diseased eyes, Reduced vision for want of the proper glasses, Female diseases, or any evidence of breaking down in MAN or WOMAN? If so, consult Dr. R. S. Piper, the master specialist of Chronic Diseases. No matter how hopeless you may feel, or how many doctors have treated you, if there is a cure for you, he will tell you so. If you wish to consult a real Chicago Specialist in your home town, don't waste any time, but come at the above place at the stated time.

ONE AMERICAN AMONG THEM

Clement Shorter Names Thomas A. Edison as One of Ten Greatest Men of Age.

"Doubtless," writes Clement Shorter, in the Strand, "there are many great men living in the world today—men with prospective greatness, that is, or even achieved greatness—but only time can decide. In my judgment, there is no man in the world today who is great in any walk of life in so striking a way that his contemporaries can unhesitatingly proclaim him great. History has proclaimed the elder Pitt a great man, but not so certainly his son. It has not assigned his epithet to Palmerston or Peel, and it is too early yet to decide whether it will concede it to Gladstone or Disraeli. The great man is surely he who, by force of genius, has impressed himself upon his age in some permanent form. Whether the achievements of Mr. Roosevelt or of Emperor William are of this character had better be decided a century hence. As you ask me, however, to join in what can scarcely be a serious discussion, I suggest that we take the name of a living man from each country who has, by invention or creation, stamped himself upon his age. I therefore nominate the ten greatest men of the present day as follows:

"Great Britain, Thos. Hardy; Great Britain, Lord Lister; United States, Thomas A. Edison; Italy, Guglielmo Marconi; Italy, Giacomo Puccini; France, Francois Coppee; Austria, Richard Strauss; Germany, Hermann Sudermann; Belgium, Maurice Maeterlinck; Russia, Elie Metchnikoff."

PAINTER IN HIS OLD AGE

Retired Rear Admiral Wins Distinction With His Landscapes Done in Water Colors.

Rear Admiral Charles Henry Davis, who retired from active service in the United States navy four years ago, has thirty-two paintings on exhibition in the Gorcoran Art gallery at Washington, D. C., which is one of the finest public galleries in America and one in which the knights of the palette and brush consider it quite a triumph to have their pictures exhibited. To a singular genius he has added painstaking industry, and has pushed himself up into an enviable place among the best landscape painters in water colors in this country.

At a time in life when he was supposed to have finished his mission, and to be allowed to go back and sit down in a corner and be very still, the old hero of the Civil war and Spanish-American war appears as virile in his intellect as he was at thirty, and has become a master of art, reveling in a realm of beauty, and transferring the beauty from his own soul to canvas, to delight and bless his fellows. What a beautiful example this grizzled old veteran and this delicate artist set to old men who think there is nothing left for them to do.—The Christian Herald.

Independent Beggar.

William E. Kilganon, clerk of the juvenile court, found out Saturday afternoon that some men beg because they do not wish to work. An agile fellow, fairly well dressed, was about the courthouse asking for "just a dime." He "struck" Kilganon.

"I won't give you any money," said Kilganon, "but I can get you a good job." Kilganon remembered that a manufacturer had called him over the phone a short time before and told him he was in need of a good man. He said he would pay $1.75 a day.

Kilganon had taken the receiver from the telephone and was about to tell the manufacturer he had found a man for him when the beggar asked how much the job would pay. Gilganon told him.

"I wouldn't work for anybody for that," said the beggar.

"All right," replied Kilganon, "get out of here."—Indianapolis News.

German Working Girls.

Late statistics give a good idea of how the increasingly large number of country girls who go to the larger cities from villages and small towns in Germany earn their daily bread. The largest number are employed in cotton factories. There were about 150,000 girls employed last year in cotton mills and 52,000 in tobacco factories. In laundries 8,300 women are employed, of whom a large number eventually went into service as housemaids.

PEER LIKES AMERICA

Duke Prefers United States to Own Ancestral Acres.

As Usual, He Is Making His Headquarters at a Local Club, and Likewise Spending Much Time in Other Cities.

New York.—Millions upon millions of educated people on both sides of the Atlantic are convinced that there is no more agreeable existence in the world than that of a British duke, possessed of a fortune adequate to his rank, as well as of some of those grand old ancestral country seats—palaces rather than mansions—that are the glory of England.

That an English duke, who has one of the finest country seats, in perhaps the most beautiful part of England, and in the enjoyment of a large fortune, with no cares and incumbrances, above all with no blemishes of character calculated to impair in the slightest degree the respect accorded to his rank, should prefer life in the United States—not the exciting and adventurous existence of the plains and of the far west—but that of the ordinary, well-to-do citizen—will appear to many as a ground for astonishment.

The peer in question is the duke of Newcastle, who has arrived here with the intention of remaining until near Easter, making his headquarters, as usual, at the Metropolitan club in New York, but likewise spending a fair portion of his time in Philadelphia, where he has many intimate friends. He has been coming over here like this for some twelve years past, that is to say, spending three and even four months of every twelve on this side of the Atlantic, living quietly, mingling but little with the "smart set," but seeing much of his numerous friends.

The duke of Newcastle was, during his minority, a ward of William E. Gladstone and, thanks to the careful management of his estates by the great Liberal statesman, he found himself, when he came of age, rid of all the financial difficulties which had darkened his father's life and broken his spirit. He came into possession of a large sum of ready money, and of extremely valuable estates free from all incumbrances.

While the duke devotes himself to photography, to pike fishing—he has had the finest of that kind of sport in England in the great lake and its river at Clumber, landing on one occasion a forty-pounder, which, stuffed, now occupies a place of honor in his library—and to the interests of the Anglican church, the duchess, as befits a daughter of the late Major "Sugar" Candy of that fine old sporting regiment, the Ninth Lancers, has her time fully occupied with hunting and the breeding of horses and dogs. She has long acted as master of the hounds of the ancient hunt known as the Clumber Harriers, associated for generations with the dukedom of Newcastle, and in the dog world she is celebrated as one of the best judges and breeders in the United Kingdom.

The duchess, who was married at the age of nineteen, spends the greater part of the year at Clumber, and although the duke has his hobbies and pursuits, and the duchess hers, and although they have no children, yet they are the best of friends, even if not a particularly united couple, their respective interests keeping them often apart for months together.

The next heir to the dukedom and to Clumber is Lord Francis Hope, who, since divorcing the American music hall artist, May Yohe, has married an Australian divorcee, by whom he has a son, aged five.

"L" Conductor Falls to Death.

Chicago.—Opening a gate on a South Side elevated train and leaning far out to ascertain why the train had been suddenly stopped by a block signal the other afternoon, Daniel Harris, thirty-two years old, a conductor, was thrown from the train when it suddenly lurched forward and instantly killed by a plunge into the alley below. Harris was dead when found a short time later.

ORIGINAL TABLE FOR DEN

Desk-Closet-Bookcase-Table Designed by an Interior Decorator for His Own Use.

An interior decorator has had executed for his own use in a little, built-in den a unique desk-closet-bookcase-table. He bought one of those table-desks with a drawer in the middle and a narrow shelf at each end. The shelves are about fifteen inches from the floor, are supported, back and front, by little slats and are open at the ends of the table. He had his workmen make a little closet out of each of these shelves by placing a board behind the slats at each end, another between the drawer and the shelf to form the closet back, and a door with a lock and key across each end of the table. There was still unutilized space below the drawer and between the closets. This, it at first seemed, he would need for knee room when using the table as a desk. But at last he hit upon the plan of building into that space two shelves which, by touching a button, could be made to slide back far enough to permit him to draw close to his desk. These shelves were filled with books, so that when flush with the table edge, the gay bindings were in full view. The closets may be used for writing materials, liquors, cigars, pipes, magazines—any of the little things that usually litter a den. A cabinet maker or interior decorator would so transform a table for no great sum.—Vogue.

CENTRAL IS SURE TO KNOW

Telephone Operator Infallible Authority on Pronunciation of Difficult Proper Names.

Three men argued over the pronunciation of a fourth man's name. The fourth man was not present. He was prominent, but unknown to the disputants.

"We'll settle this thing right now," said one.

He called a telephone operator on the fourth man's exchange.

"Say, Central, how do you pronounce this name?" he asked.

He spelled it out. She told him. Her pronunciation differed from anything previously suggested.

"But it is all right, am sure," said the man who had telephoned. "Those girls always know. They are an authority on the pronunciation of proper names. A man with a funny name can't bear to hear it called wrong, even over the phone, and the first thing he does when he acquires the use of a new telephone is to drill the operator on the correct pronunciation."

Sleep.

The doctor folk would change the instruction "early to bed and early to rise" to "early to bed and late to rise." They have been studying sleep from the physiological, the chemical and biological points of view, and they find that of the many sacrifices made to the pursuit of happiness the most unhappy results come from the sacrifice of sleep.

The Medical Record says: "We are apt to call Towser and Tabby lazy animals, but no physiologist doubts that they live more hygienically in respect to sleep than do their human masters or mistresses. It is declared that in the cities "well-to-do multitures live and die without experience of the pure delight of unadulterated muscle fatigue and of the sudden and deep sleep that normally follows a day of purely muscular work."

The campaign for gymnasiums, the preaching about exercise and athletics, the annual summer vacation rush, the vast literature about the simple life, even the back-to-the-soil movement, may all have their true source in that silent crying of the human body for normal living—a feeling of perfect fitness associated with intense wakefulness, muscular weariness in company with the desire for sleep.—Toledo Blade.

His Peculiar Way.

A well-known artist, whose pictures are characterized by extreme delicacy and beauty both of subject and treatment, recounted a somewhat florid story to his model one day. Shortly after the model happening to pose for a painter whose pictures are noted for being quite the reverse of delicate, told the tale to him. "Rather vulgar," was his comment. Next time the model saw the first artist she said:

"Do you remember the story you told me the other day? Mr. ——— says it is vulgar."

"Oh, well," was the indifferent reply, "every man has a streak of vulgarity in his composition. In one it may come out in the stories he tells, while another gives expression to it in his pictures."

Ear Phones for a Church.

Ear phones have been introduced into the Wollaston Congregational Church of Quincy, Mass. This is the first church in the city to adopt this invention.

A transmitter and six receivers comprise the initial equipment and should these prove satisfactory others will be added as occasion requires.

The apparatus is extremely simple, consisting of a neat box-like transmitter at the pulpit and modest watch-like receivers, on convenient handles, in various pews. Receivers and transmitters are connected by invisible wiring and the electricity is supplied by dry cells.

5 KILLED; 60 HURT IN WABASH WRECK

Continental Limited Goes Into Ditch Near West Lebanon, Ind.

ROLLS DOWN HIGH BANK

Disaster Caused by Broken Rail—Passengers at Dinner When Train Strikes Defective Track—Many Crushed to Death.

Danville, Ill., March 8.—Five persons were killed and nearly threescore injured at Redwood bridge, two miles west of West Lebanon, Ind., by the derailment of the Continental limited train, west-bound on the Wabash railroad. Several of the injured may die and others may be dead in the wreckage.

All the cars left the rails and some of them turned over. A broken rail is said to have caused the accident. Two of the cars rolled partly into a creek, the derailment taking place at the end of a bridge.

The locomotive remained upright on the rails, and word was sent as soon as possible to division headquarters at Peru, Ind., and Decatur, Ill. Some delay was experienced, because wires were torn down by the coaches as they rolled over.

Dead and Bodies Recovered.

Mrs. U. G. Good, boarded train at Fort Wayne, Ind., en route to St. Louis; back broken; died almost instantly.

Mrs. Grant, en route to Kansas City; killed instantly.

Pullman porter, name unknown.

Unknown youth, about eighten years old.

Relief Trains Rush to Scene.

Wrecking and relief trains rushed to the scene from east and west, and began the work of rescue. The wounded were rapidly placed aboard a special train, composed of two cabooses, and hurried to Danville.

Passengers were preparing to eat dinner as the train approached the Redwood bridge, near the Illinois state line. Without a jolt, at first, the whole train seemed to weave to one side, and then the coaches rolled, crushed together, and piled up alongside the track. The baggage and mail cars suffered the most, as they led the rest of the train from the track.

Build Fires in the Snow.

Nearly every passenger in the train was hurt by the rolling over of the cars.

Two or three persons were killed instantly, but the others were pinned down by seats or splintered timbers and mangled to death.

Those who were unhurt soon dragged the injured from the overturned cars, with the exception of a few who could not be extricated until wrecking derricks arrived.

Repair Telegraph Line.

Several men started repairing the telegraph line, and when the relief trains arrived there was a fairly orderly scene except for the wreckage, at which men were tugging and prying in an effort to recover any persons that might be pinioned there in distress.

Those needing attention most were placed quickly aboard two cabooses and sent to Danville at top speed.

With the movable injured out of the way the wrecking crews began to lift the broken coaches from the bottom of the thirty-foot embankment.

Wreck Occurs at High Bank.

As the wreck occurred on a curve on a high embankment leading to the bridge, it was difficult to get the steam cranes in working position, and it may be many hours before the wreckage is cleared away and the total number of dead can be definitely announced.

HOUSE OF FAMOUS MEMORIES

Old Mott Mansion In New York Has Long Been a Landmark of the City.

The old Mott Memorial Hall at 64 Madison avenue, New York, which was recently purchased at auction by the McVicker1Gaillard Company for a client for $70,000, was several years ago a famous medical and surgical headquarters, containing the library and surgical specimens of the eminent surgeon Dr. Valentine Mott. Before the erection of the Medical Academy in Forty-third street it was used as the meeting place of many medical societies. The property has been owned by the Mott family for many years and has now just passed into other hands, and within the past week the fine bust of Dr. Mott, made by J. Q. A. Ward, was removed from the old library to the home of one of the sons. Beside being the headquarters of the medical fraternity for many years the Grolier club was organized there, and the New York Genealogical and Biographical Society was also formed there and used the rooms for its meeting place forty years ago.

Mott House in New York.

The first woman physician in this country, Dr. Mary Putnam, read her first paper there. Later day events were the nomination of Theodore Roosevelt for member of the assembly, and the private reception given to Charles Stuart Parnell on his first visit to America. Maud Gonne, the Irish Joan of Arc, also spoke there.

The plot was bought in 1865 for $30,000, and it is said that the two lots north could have been bought for the same figure. So strong has been the upward rise of real estate values that the average price per lot in that section today is $125,000.

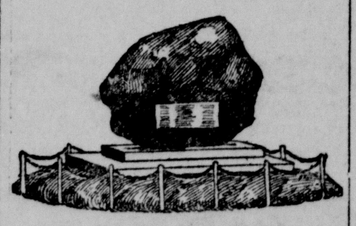

MEMORIAL ON HISTORIC SPOT

Plan on Foot to Mark Place Where Important Treaty With Indians Was Signed.

An appeal is being made by the Saskatchewan branch of the Western Art association for funds for the purpose of erecting a memorial at Fort Qu'Appelle to mark the spot where the treaty with the Indians was signed which handed over this country to the use of the white man for ever.

It is proposed that the memorial should take the form of a mass of native rock, with the names of the signatories to the treaty carved upon a bronze tablet which will be let into the face of the stone. This stone will be erected on the site pointed out by Mr. Archie McDonald and the Rev. Father Hugonnard of the Mission, who were both personally present at the signing of the treaty.

The committee hopes to be able to mark off the plot of ground around the memorial stone with a suitable enclosure. They appeal to the general public to give them the financial assistance necessary to carry this program to completion, and feel confident that they can count on the support of everyone who is interested in the history of their adopted home. It was a great historic occasion and certainly deserves to be commemorated in some lasting form.

It is estimated that a sum of $3,000 will be required to worthily complete the schemes.—Montreal Herald.

Only Chicken-Nosed Man.

Pottsville, Pa.—Charles William Kalbach, 65 years, the only resident of Pottsville who ever had chicken flesh successfully grafted upon his body, died suddenly at his home here the other day while eating breakfast. Some years ago he met with an accident which resulted in the slicing off of part of his nose, and a local physician successfully experimented by replacing the missing portion with a piece of chicken flesh and skin, with scarcely any disfigurement.

THE SAVIOR'S TEACHINGS — BROOKLYN TABERNACLE — BIBLE STUDIES

HE HEALETH THEIR DISEASES.

Mark i, 29-45—March 10.

"Himself took our infirmities, and bore our sicknesses."—Matthew viii, 17.

TODAY'S STUDY follows closely the one of a week ago. When Jesus left the Capernaum synagogue He went to St. Peter's home. There St. Peter's mother-in-law lay sick of a fever. It was the work of but a moment for the Savior to take her by the hand and to raise her up to health. Meantime the fame of Jesus had spread and by evening there were crowds importuning His healing words and touch: "And He healed many that were sick of divers diseases, and cast out many demons, and suffered not the demons to speak, because they knew Him."

Nothing is more attractive to the human mind than the miraculous power of healing disease. No one enjoys disease, pain and suffering. People would be glad to be healed of disease, even if they were assured that the cures were performed by the power of Satan himself. It should not surprise us today that many false doctrines, wholly out of harmony with God's Word, commend themselves to the poor, groaning creation by promises of relief from physical ailments.

The true healer restoring St. Peter's mother.

But since these healers hold various and antagonistic doctrines, it is manifest that all are not of God, if any of them are. To our understanding, the Bible teaches that no miraculous healing at the present time is authorized by God's Word. St. Paul declared by inspiration that the gifts granted to the early Church, and exercised by Jesus and the Apostles and those to whom they personally communicated them, would pass away. The miracles were merely with a view to the establishment of the early Church.

Neither the Lord Nor the Apostles Healed Believers.

It is quite true that under the Law Covenant which God made with Israel He agreed that sickness would be a penalty for violation of the Law, and health a reward for the obedient. The statement of the Prophet, "Who healeth all thy diseases," was applicable physically to the Israelites under the Law Covenant. It has also a spiritual application to the Church, the New Creation.

But the healing of the New Creature and the healing of his flesh are different things. The New Creature's soul sickness and heart troubles are all cured by the Good Physician—even though his flesh may suffer pain and go down into death. We are to remember that the condition upon which we were begotten of the Holy Spirit to be new creatures was a full surrender of the flesh and its interests, as living sacrifices.—Romans xii, 1.

Nor is this any change from the Lord's dealings with the Church from the very beginning. So far as the records show, all, or nearly all, who were healed by Jesus and the Apostles, were "sinners." Surely there is no record of a single instance in which any of the Apostles were healed of any disease. Although St. Paul healed many sick, yet when Epaphroditus was sick and "nigh unto death" we have no mention of any attempt to miraculously recover him.

The counterfeit healer.

Similarly, in the case of Timothy, we find that St. Paul neither sent him napkins nor handkerchiefs for his healing, nor advised him to pray for his own healing. On the contrary, he advised certain medicines, "for thy stomach's sake." Indeed, we believe that for God's consecrated people to ask for physical healing would be to attempt to take back again what they have specifically consecrated to the Lord.

A Cleansed Leper Thankful.

Today's lesson mentions another case of healing. Leprosy was regarded by the Jews as an incurable disease, and as a type of sin. The leper of this study had faith in the power of Jesus, and came and kneeled before Him and entreated healing, cleansing. His prayer was answered.

Jesus admonished the leper not to make known so great a miracle; but in his thankfulness he could not restrain himself; he told it everywhere. The result was that Jesus could not thereafter visit the large cities because He would be overwhelmed with the number brought to Him for healing.

But alas! they were more appreciative of the restitution blessings than the great privilege which our Lord specially offered them of becoming His followers and joint-heirs in His Kingdom, which, by and by, will dispense restitution blessings and healing far and near to every member of Adam's race, condemned through the fall of Adam, and redeemed by the precious blood of Calvary.

To Every Woman Who Wishes to Know "What's What" In Style

Our selections of coats, suits and skirts for spring wear are arriving daily and the showing is already large enough to give you a good "line" on the approved fashions for the approaching season.

Prominent in the collection are many coats and suits bearing the Wooltex label, a label that has become the recognized seal or authority in American fashions for women.

Among these superb garments are exact copies of styles created in Paris by Poiret, Drecoll, Paguin, Worth, Callot. Others are adaptations of Paris styles. Still others are original and exclusive Wooltex creations—for the Wooltex style staff includes several of the best designers in America.

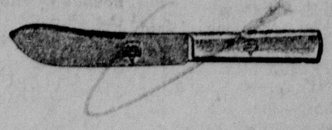

New Materials are many, but serge still holds its place in favor. There are several new colors, but no tendency is shown to dislodge--the old-time blues, grays, and browns. In trimming the bright colors and white are much used.

The lines of jackets and skirts present many changes, but these are easier to show than to describe.

WHEN A MAN MARRIES

BY MARY ROBERTS RINEHART
AUTHOR of THE CIRCULAR STAIRCASE
"THE MAN IN LOWER TEN, ETC.

COPYRIGHT, 1909, BY THE BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—James Wilson or Jimmy as he is called by his friends, Jimmy was rotund and looked shorter than he really was. His ambition in life was to be taken seriously, but people steadily refused to do so, his art is considered a huge joke, except to himself, if he asked people to dinner everyone expected a frolic. Jimmy marries Bella Knowles; they live together a year and are divorced.

CHAPTER II.—Jimmy's friends arrange to celebrate the first anniversary of his divorce. Those who attend the party are Miss Katherine McNair, who every one calls Kit. Mr. and Mrs. Dallas Brown, the Misses Mercer, Maxwell Reed and a Mr. Thomas Harbison, a South American civil engineer. The party is in full swing when Jimmy receives a telegram from his Aunt Selina, who will arrive in four hours to visit him and his wife. Jimmy gets his funds from Aunt Selina and after he marries she doubles his allowance. He neglects to tell her of his divorce, as she is opposed to it. Jimmy takes Kit into his confidence, he tries to devise some way so that his aunt will not learn that he has no longer a wife. He suggests that Kit play the hostess for one night, be Mrs. Wilson pro tem. Kit refuses, but is finely prevailed upon to act the part.

CHAPTER III.—Aunt Selina arrives and the deception works out as planned, as she had never seen Jim's wife.

CHAPTER IV.—Jim's Jap servant is taken ill, his face is covered with spots. Bella, Jimmy's divorced wife enters the house and asks Kit who is being taken away in the ambulance, she insists it is Jim. Kit tells her Jim is well and is in the house. Bella tells Kit it wasn't him she wanted to see, but Takahiro, the Jap servant, as she wished to secure his services. Harbison steps out on the porch and discovers a man tacking a card on the door. He demands an explanation. The man points to the card and he sees the word smallpox printed on it. The man is an officer from the board of health and tells him the house is under quarantine and that the guests will have to stay until the quarantine is lifted.

CHAPTER V.—The guests suddenly realize their predicament, the women shed tears, the men consider it a good joke.

CHAPTER VI.—Harbison pleads with Kit to tell him the real situation of things. She finally tells him of Bella's incarceration in the basement.

CHAPTER VII.—The all important question arises as to who is to prepare the meals and perform the other household duties. Harbison finally solves the matter. He writes out slips containing the various departments of the house, each one is assigned to his or her duties

CHAPTER VIII.—After the lifting of the quarantine several letters written by the guests were found in the mail box undelivered, one is addressed to Henry Llewellyn, Union Nitrate Company, Iquique, Chile, which was written by Harbison. He describes minutely of their incarceration, also of his infatuation for Mrs. Wilson.

CHAPTER IX.—Harbison attempts to patch up one quarrel after another between Kit and Jimmy. Aunt Selina is taken ill with la grippe. Betty acts as nurse.

CHAPTER X.—Harbison finds Kit sulking on the roof. She tells him that Jim has been treating her outrageously. Harbison fully believing that she is Mrs. Wilson, tells her that she doesn't mean the things she is saying about her husband. Kit starts downstairs, when suddenly she is grasped in the arms of a man who kisses her several times. She believes that Harbison is the one who did it and is humiliated.

CHAPTER XI.—Aunt Selina tells Jimmy her cameo breastpin and other articles of jewelry and her money has been stolen. She accuses Betty of the theft.

CHAPTER XII.—The following morning Jimmy was in a rage. The papers published a story about the incarceration of the party, and that one of the guests had attempted to escape by means of laying a board across to the roof of the adjoining house, but was frustrated by a detective who fired a revolver at him.

CHAPTER XIII.—Jimmy tells Aunt Selina all the strange happenings, but she persists in suspecting Betty of the theft of her valuables.

CHAPTER XIV.—Dal devises a plan to escape from the house. They set fire to the reception room and attempt to leave the house from the rear. Th guards discover the ruse and rush back to the rear of the house in time to prevent them from escaping in automobiles that had been ordered for their flight.

CHAPTER XV.

Suspicion and Discord.

Every one was nasty the next morning. Aunt Selina declared that her feet were frost-bitten and kept Bella rubbing them with ice water all morning. And Jim was impossible. He refused to speak to any of us, and he watched Bella furtively, as if he suspected her of trying to get him out of the house.

When luncheon time came around and he had shown no indication of going to the telephone and ordering it, we had a conclave, and Max was chosen to remind him of the hour. Jim was shut in the studio, and we waited together in the hall while Max went up. When he came down he was somewhat ruffled.

"He wouldn't open the door," he reported, "and when I told him it was meal time, he said he wasn't hungry, and he didn't give a whoop about the rest of us. He had asked us here to dinner; he hadn't proposed to adopt us."

So we finally ordered luncheon ourselves, and about two o'clock Jim came downstairs, sheepishly, and ate what was left. Anne declared that Bella had been scolding him in the upper hall, but I doubted it. She was never seen to speak to him unnecessarily.

The excitement of the escape over, Mr. Harbison and I remained on terms of armed neutrality. And Max still hunted for Anne's pearls, using them, the men declared, as a good excuse to avoid tinkering with the furnace or repairing the dumb-waiter, which took the queerest notions, and stopped once half-way up from the kitchen, for an hour, with the dinner on it. Anyhow, Max was searching the house systematically, armed with a copy of Poe's "Purloined Letter" and Gaboriau's "Monsieur Lecoq." He went through the seats of the chairs with hatpins, tore up the beds, and lifted rugs, until the house was in a state of confusion. And the next day, the fourth he found something—not much, but it was curious. He had been in the studio, poking around behind the dusty pictures, with Jimmy expostulating every time he moved anything and the rest standing around watching him.

Max was strutting.

"We get it by eliminations," he said, importantly. "The pearls being nowhere else in the house, they must be here in the studio. Three parts of the studio having yielded nothing, they must be in the fourth. Ladies and gentlemen, let me have your attention for one moment. I tap this canvas with my wand—there is nothing up my sleeve. Then I prepare to move the canvas—so. And I put my hand in the pocket of this disreputable velvet coat, so. Behold!"

Then he gave a low exclamation and looked at something he held in his hand. Every one stepped forward, and on his palm was the small diamond clasp from Anne's collar!

Jimmy was apologetic. He tried to smile, but no one else did.

"Well, I'll be flabbergasted!" he said, "I say, you people, you don't think for a minute that I put that thing there? Why, I haven't worn that coat for a month. It's—it's a trick of yours, Max."

But Max shook his head; he looked stupefied, and stood gazing from the clasp to the pocket of the old painting coat. Betty dropped on a folding stool, that promptly collapsed with her and created a welcome diversion, while Anne pounced on the clasp greedily, with a little cry.

"We will find it all now," she said, excitedly. "Did you look in the other pockets, Max?"

Then, for the first time, I was conscious of an air of constraint among the men. Dallas was whistling softly, and Mr. Harbison, having rescued Betty, was standing silent and aloof, watching the scene with non-committal eyes. It was Max who spoke first, after a hurried inventory of the other pockets.

"Nothing else," he said, constrainedly. "I'll move the rest of the canvases."

But Jim interfered, to every one's surprise.

"I wouldn't if I were you, Max. There's nothing back there. I had 'em out yesterday." He was quite pale.

"Nonsense!" Max said gruffly. "If it's a practical joke, Jim, why don't you 'fess up? Anne has worried enough."

"The pearls are not there, I tell you," Jim began. Although the studio was cold, there were little fine beads of moisture on his face. "I must ask you not to move those pictures." And then Aunt Selina came to the rescue; she stalked over and stood with her back against the stack of canvasses.

"As far as I understand this," she declaimed, "You gentlemen are trying to intimate that James knows something of that young woman's jewelry, because you found a part of it in his pocket. Certainly you will not move the pictures. How do you know that the young gentleman who said he found it there didn't have it up his sleeve?"

She looked around triumphantly, and Max glowered. Dallas soothed her, however.

"Exactly so," he said. "How do we know that Max didn't have the clasp up his sleeve? My dear lady, neither my wife nor I care anything for the pearls, as compared with the priceless pearl of peace. I suggest tea on the roof; those in favor—? My arm, Miss Caruthers."

It was all well enough for Jim to say later that he didn't dare to have the canvases moved, for he had stuck behind them all sorts of chorus girl photographs and life-class crayons that were not for Aunt Selina's eye, besides four empty siphons, two full ones, and three bottles of whisky. Not a soul believed him; there was a new element of suspicion and discord in the house.

Every one went up on the roof and left him to his mystery. Anne drank her tea in a preoccupied silence, with half-closed eyes, an attitude that boded ill to somebody. The rest were feverishly gay, and Aunt Selina, with a pair of arctics on her feet and a hot-water bottle at her back, sat in the middle of the tent and told me familiar anecdotes of Jimmy's early youth (had he known, he would have slain her.) Betty and Mr. Harbison had found a medicine ball, and were running around like a pair of children. It was quite certain that neither his escape from death nor my accusation weighed heavily on him.

While Aunt Selina was busy with the time Jim had swallowed an open safety pin, and just as the pin had been coughed up, or taken out of his nose—I forget which—Jim himself appeared and sulkily demanded the privacy of the roof for his training hour.

Yes, he was training. Flannigan claimed to know the system that had reduced the president to what he is, and he and Jim had a seance every day which left Jim feeling himself for bruises all evening. He claimed to be losing flesh; he said he could actually feel it going, and he and Flannigan had spent an entire afternoon in the cellar three days before with a potato barrel, a cane-seated chair and a lamp.

The whole thing had been shrouded in mystery. They sandpapered the inside of the barrel and took out all the nails, and when they had finished they carried it to the roof and put it in a corner behind the tent. Everybody was curious, but Flannigan refused any information about it, and merely said it was part of his system. Dal said that if he had anything like that in his system he certainly would be glad to get rid of it.

At a quarter to six Jim appeared, still sullen from the events of the afternoon and wearing a dressing-gown and a pair of slippers, Flannigan following him with a sponge, a bucket of water and an armful of bath towels. Everybody protested at having to move, but he was firm, and they all filed down the stairs. I was the last, with Aunt Selina just ahead of me. At the top of the stairs she turned around suddenly to me.

"That policeman looks cruel," she said. "What's more, he's been in a bad humor all day. More than likely he'll put James flat on the roof and tramp on him, under pretense of training him. All policemen are inhuman."

"He only rolls him over a barrel or something like that," I protested.

"James had a lump like an egg over his ear last night," Aunt Selina insisted, glaring at Flannigan's unconscious back. "I don't think it's safe to leave him. It is my time to relax for 30 minutes, or I would watch him. You will have to stay," she said, fixing me with her imperious eyes.

So I stayed. Jim didn't want me, and Flannigan muttered mutiny. But it was easier to obey Aunt Selina than to clash with her, and anyhow I wanted to see the barrel in use.

I never saw any one train before. It is not a joyful spectacle. First, Flannigan made Jim run, around and around the roof. He said it stirred up his food and brought it in contact with his liver, to be digested.

Flannigan, from meekness and submission, of a sort, became an autocrat on the roof.

"Once more," he would say. "Pick up your feet, sir! Pick up your feet!"

And Jim would stagger doggedly past me, where I sat on the parapet, his poor cheeks shaking and the tail of his bath robe wrapping itself around his legs. Yes, he ran in the bath robe in deference to me. It seems there isn't much to a running suit.

"Head up," Flannigan would say. "Lift your knees, sir. Didn't you ever see a horse with string halt?"

He let him stop finally, and gave him a moment to get his breath. Then he set him to turning somersaults. They spread the cushions from the couch in the tent on the roof, and Jim would poke his head down and say a prayer, and then curve over as gracefully as a sausage and come up gasping, as if he had been pushed off a boat.

"Five pounds a day; not less, sir," Flannigan said, encouragingly. "You'll drop it in chunks."

Jim looked at the tin as if he expected to see the chunks lying at his feet.

"Yes," he said, wiping the back of his neck. "If we're in here 30 days that will be 150 pounds. Don't forget to stop in time, Flannigan. I don't want to melt away like a candle."

He was cheered, however, by the promise of reduction.

"What do you think of that, Kit?" he called to me. "Your uncle is going to look as angular as a problem in geometry. I'll—I'll be the original reductio ad absurdum. Do you want me to stand on my head, Flannigan? Wouldn't that reduce something?"

"Your brains, sir," Flannigan retorted, gravely, and presented a pair of boxing gloves. Jim visibly quailed, but he put them on.

"Do you know, Flannigan," he remarked, as he fastened them, "I'm thinking of wearing these all the time. They hide my character."

Flannigan looked puzzled, but he did not ask an explanation. He demanded that Jim shed the bath robe, which he finally did, on my promise to watch the sunset. Then for fully a minute there was no sound save of feet running rapidly around the roof and an occasional soft thud. Each thud was accompanied by a grunt or two from Jim. Flannigan was grimly silent. Once there was a smart rap, an oath from the policeman, and a mirthless chuckle from Jim. The chuckle ended in a crash, however, and I turned. Jim was lying on his back on the roof, and Flannigan was wiping his ear with a towel. Jim sat up and ran his hand down his ribs.

"They're all here," he observed after a minute. "I thought I missed one."

"The only way to take a man's weight down," Flannigan said dryly.

Jim got up dizzily.

"Down on the roof, I suppose you mean," he said.

The next proceedings were mysterious. Flannigan rolled the barrel into the tent, and carried a small glass lamp. With the material at hand he seemed to be effecting a combination, no new one, to judge by his facility. Then he called Jim.

At the door of the tent Jim turned to me, his bath-robe toga fashion around his shoulders.

"This is a very essential part of the treatment," he said, solemnly. "The exercise, according to Flannigan, loosens up the adipose tissue. The next step is to boil it out. I hope, unless your instructions compel you, that you will at least have the decency to stay out of the tent."

"I am going at once," I said, outraged. "I'm not here because I'm mad about it, and you know it. And don't pose with that bath robe. If you think you're a character out of Roman history, look at your legs."

"I didn't mean to offend you," he said sulkily. "Only I'm tired of having you choked down my throat every time I open my mouth, Kit. And don't go just yet. Flannigan is going for my clothes as soon as he lights the —the lamp, and—somebody ought to watch the stairs."

That was all there was to it. I said I would guard the steps, and Flannigan, having ignited the combination, whatever it was, went downstairs. How was I to know that Bella would come up when she did? Was it my fault that the lamp got too high, and that Flannigan couldn't hear Jim calling? or that just as Bella reached the top of the steps Jim should come to the door of the tent wearing the barrel part of his hot-air cabinet, and yelling for a doctor?

Bella came to a dead stop on the upper step, with her mouth open. She looked at Jim, at the inadequate barrel, and from them she looked at me. Then she began to laugh, one of her hysterical giggles, and she turned and went down again. As Jim and I stared at each other we could hear her gurgling down the hall below.

She had violent hysterics for an hour, with Anne rubbing her forehead and Aunt Selina burning a feather out of the feather duster under her nose. Only Jim and I understood, and we did not tell. Luckily, the next thing that occurred drove Bella and her nerves from everybody's mind.

At seven o'clock, when Bella had dropped asleep and everybody else was dressed for dinner, Aunt Selina discovered that the house was cold, and ordered Dal to the furnace.

It was Dal's day at the furnace; Flannigan had been relieved of that part of the work after twice setting fire to a chimney.

In five minutes Dal came back and spoke a few words to Max, who followed him to the basement and in ten minutes more Flannigan puffed up the steps and called Mr. Harbison.

I am not curious, but I knew that something had happened. While Aunt Selina was talking suffrage to Anne—who said she had always been tremendously interested in the subject, and if women got the suffrage would they be allowed to vote?—I slipped back to the dining-room.

The table was laid for dinner, but Flannigan was not in sight. I could hear voices from somewhere, faint voices that talked rapidly, and after a while I located the sounds under my feet. The men were all in the basement, and something must have happened. I flew to the basement stairs, to meet Mr. Harbison at the foot. He was grimy and dusty, with streaks of coal dust over his face, and he had been examining his revolver. I was just in time to see him slip it into his pocket.

"What is the matter?" I demanded. "Is any one hurt?"

"No one," he said coolly. "We've been cleaning out the furnace."

"With a revolver! How interesting—and unusual!" I said dryly, and slipped past him as he barred the way. He was not pleased; I heard him mutter something and come rapidly after me, but I had the voices as a guide, and I was not going to be turned back like a child. The men had gathered around a low stone arch in the furnace room, and were looking down a short flight of steps, into a sort of vault, under the pavement. A faint light came from a small grating above, and there was a close, musty smell in the air.

"I tell you it must have been last night," Dallas was saying. "Wilson and I were here before we went to bed, and I'll swear that hole was not there then."

"It was not there this morning, sir," Flannigan insisted. "It has been made during the day."

"And it could not have been done this afternoon," Mr. Harbison said, quietly. "I was fussing with the telephone wire down here. I would have heard the noise."

Something in his voice made me look at him, and certainly his expression was unusual. He was watching us all intently while Dallas pointed out to me the cause of the excitement. From the main floor of the furnace room, a flight of stone steps surmounted by an arch led into the coal cellar, beneath the street. The coal cellar was of brick, with a cement floor, and in the left wall there gaped an opening about three feet by three, leading into a cavernous void, perfectly black—evidently a similar vault belonging to the next house.

The whole place was ghostly, full of shadows, shivery with possibilities. It was Mr. Harbison finally who took Jim's candle and crawled through the aperture. We waited in dead silence, listening to his feet crunching over the coal beyond, watching the faint yellow light that came through the ragged opening in the wall. Then he called through to us.

"Place is locked, over here," he said. "Heavy oak door at the head of the steps. Whoever made that opening has done a prodigious amount of labor for nothing."

The weapon, a crowbar, lay on the ground beside the bricks, and he picked it up and balanced it on his hand. Dallas' florid face was almost comical in his bewilderment; as for Jimmy—he slammed a piece of slag at the furnace and walked away. At the door he turned around.

"Why don't you accuse me of it?" he asked, bitterly. "Maybe you could find a lump of coal in my pockets if you searched me."

He stalked up the stairs then and left us. Dallas and I went up together, but we did not talk. There seemed to be nothing to say. Not until I had closed and locked the door of my room did I venture to look at something that I carried in the palm of my hand. It was a watch, not running—a gentleman's flat gold watch, and it had been hanging by its fob to a nail in the bricks beside the aperture.

In the back of the watch were the initials T. H. H. and the picture of a girl, cut from a newspaper.

It was my picture.

As farmers in Canada are going broke and land prices tumbling no one will buy it. I have talked and advertised for ten years that only a third or less of either of the Dakotas was good for farming and the good part of S. D. too high to buy. The last two crops show what is best. Cavalier county had crops in 1910 that paid for the land and also in 1911. 1912 promises much better and I will still give you a chance to pay for a farm with one crop. As an investment land here will pay better interst on $100 an acre than land in Ill. at the prices it is selling at as there so much of the rent has to be paid out for taxes, improvements and insurance. Having been here over ten years I predict Hundred Dollar land here in five to seven years. The farmers here are buying it and they are making money faster than any other farmers in the world.

NOT THE ONLY ONE

THERE ARE HUNDREDS OF DIXON PEOPLE SIMILARLY SITUATED.

Can there be any stronger proof offered than the evidence of Dixon residents? After you have read the following, quietly answer the question:

Julius Gottlieb, 418 W. First St., Dixon, Ill., says: "My back pained me for some time and I was often so lame and sore that it was hard for me to stoop. The secretions from my kidneys were irregular in passage and I was thus convinced that my kidneys were disordered. Seeing Doan's Kidney Pills advertised, I got a box at Leake Bros. Co.'s Drug Store and commenced their use. My experience with this remedy is very satisfactory and I am pleased to acknowledge the benefit I received." (Statement given April 14, 1909).

A Lasting Effect.

Mr. Gottlieb was interviewed on January 4, 1910, and he added to the above: "You may continue to publish my former endorsement of Doan's Kidney Pills. The relief they gave me has been permanent."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

MAY QUIZ WOOL FIRM

SWEEPING INVESTIGATION OF AMERICAN COMPANY LIKELY.

Inquiry Into Lawrence (Mass.) Textile Strike, Which Is Closed, Is the Cause.

Washington, March 8.—An investigation of the American Woolen company, its organization, capitalization, labor conditions and status as a corporation, it was reported, would be recommended to congress by the house committee on rules.

The action, it is said, will be a result of the preliminary inquiry into the strike of the mill workers at Lawrence, Mass.

The hearings closed after representatives of the American Woolen company had been heard. Before their testimony was taken Rev. Clark Carter, a city missionary in Lawrence, whose salary is paid by the mill owners, was on the witness stand.

Representative Foster of Illinois asked Mr. Carter about the charge for drinking water in the Lawrence mills.

"That's a social club arrangement," replied the minister. "The regular water in the summer is too hot and in winter some of it is too near to the steampipes. So the workers form clubs to get spring water or ice. They pay so much for it and when the new employes are asked for pay they think the mill owners get the money."

"Then the mill owners don't furnish drinkable water?" asked Mr. Foster.

Mr. Carter on one occasion said:

"I can say that I have permission from one of the mill owners to aid any of the needy families of strikers from his mill and to send the bill to him."

Rock Island, March 8.—Head Counsel A. R. Talbott of the Modern Woodmen of America has issued a letter warning all of the insurgents in the society, whether they be camps or individuals, that if they insist in trying to effect organized opposition to the increased insurance rates ordered by the head camp at its session in Chicago, they may forfeit their charter or their individual insurance policies in the society. The revocation of a camp or the cancellation of the individual insurance policy of any member can be made effective by a vote of the board of directors and executive council of the society.
